Discussion Questions:

- In what ways can you see the king's idolatry -- huge expectations precariously perched -- in your own heart or life? Where are you tempted to look for big-ticket needs like life, meaning, and security from lifeless things that aren't capable of delivering such lofty returns?
- Look at things in life about which you get disproportionately angry. Are you able to trace any of these instances of anger to an idol in your life?
- Where do you notice the tendency to approach God based on quantity or quality in yourself? Think about what you pray about or how you pray. Where is it characterized by an attempt to call the shots? How can considering what Jesus has done for you change how you pray or what you pray for?
